

LIVING WITNESS

Of Identification of Lincoln's Assassin Denies Modern Story of Booth's Death.

(New York World.)
Frank Oakes Rose, one of the few men now living who knew John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln, has taken issue with Basil Moxley, who declares that the body buried in Greenmount Cemetery, Baltimore, was not that of the murderer. Mr. Rose is a well-known stage manager. He is a Director of the Actors' Society of America, and among his friends is considered conservative. He is positive that there was no mistake.

At the time Booth's body was brought to Baltimore and turned over to the Booth family, Mr. Rose was a member of John T. Ford's stock company at the Holiday Street Theater. He was going to rehearsal on the morning of the day in question when he was accosted by W. E. Burton, a fellow actor. What followed Mr. Rose describes: "Burton grasped me by the arm and whispered to me to follow him," he said. "He ran across the street opposite the stage door of the theater and climbed a fence around an undertaker's shop. I went after him and also climbed the fence. As I dropped down in the inside of the inclosure I saw about 35 persons, all men, gazed at the shop door. "Among the persons, I recognized Edwin Booth and Janine Brutus Booth, John T. Ford, Thomas A. Hall, stage manager of the theater in which I was playing, and several others. There were also two men I took to be officers in the regular army.

"No one seemed to notice us and we mixed up among the crowd. After a time, in which little was said above a whisper, some one opened the undertaker's shop door from within and people began to quietly file inside. Burton and I knew that the body of John Booth— they called him by his first instead of his middle name in those days— was within, and we managed to get inside the door. The curtains had been drawn, the shutters closed and the only light was furnished by two gas jets, one at each end of a long, bare room.

"In the center of the room, on two saw horses, was a coffin. It had an old, grayish appearance, as though it had been long in a damp or moldy place. There was, however, no mold on the wood. It was closed tight, and I could see that the screws in the lid had not been removed for a considerable time. "Edwin Booth moved up to the head of the coffin with Mr. Ford and the undertaker. Janine Brutus Booth stood a little to one side and did not take any part in the identification. When the shuffling of feet ceased, Edwin Booth spoke and said:

"If this is the body of my brother John, I can identify it by a gold-plugged tooth on the right side of the jaw next to the eye tooth." "The undertaker and his assistant then removed the screws in the lid and raised the cover. Inside was the body of a man who had been a long time dead. The undertaker, Mr. Ford, and Edwin Booth then looked at the skull and found the tooth. It was pointed out to us all. "In looking at the body we saw that the upper part was clad in a bluish gray shirt and that on one foot was a riding boot and on the other a slipper. Under the head was rolled a faded army blanket. Both Burton and myself knew John Booth, but Burton knew him better than I. He had been about with him considerably and had often been skating with him in the winter.

"Suddenly Burton spoke up and said that he recognized the boot, and that a hole made for the screw of skate would be found in the heel. The boot was examined and the hole was found. "Considerable has been said about the color of the hair. It has been claimed I believe, that it was not the same color as Booth's. It would have been impossible for any one to have told the exact color. The locks were damp and matted and there was no distinct color to it at all. It might have been one of a dozen hues. While we were looking at the undertaker cut most of it off and it fell into a paper held by Mr. Ford. The latter retained several locks and had them made into an ornament resembling a bunch of flowers. This was still in the Ford family a few years ago. "There was absolutely no doubt in the minds of any of us that a com-

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.
Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmor, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmor & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. ## You Will Be Happy If Well.

Paine's Celery Compound

Bestows that Health and Vigor that Makes Living a Pleasure.

If you are sick and out-of-order, it is in your power to make yourself healthy, strong, and happy.

There is not the slightest reason why you should go through life feeling sickly, miserable, languid, and melancholic. To be well and strong, means happiness and true joy. If you are suffering from rheumatic, neuralgic, dyspeptic, or have the shadows of disease hovering over you; if you are not as bright, energetic, and strong as you were some weeks ago, the use of Paine's Celery Compound will tone up and fortify your whole system, cleanse the blood, correct digestion, sharpen the appetite, and conduce to restful sleep. Thousands are in a half-dozen months over their present good health to the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mr. Wm. S. Gibson, of Meigsville, Ky., who, through sickness and suffering, was brought near the dark grave, writes as follows, regarding his marvelous cure:—

"I have been broken down in health and strength, nervous system shattered, kidneys out of order, had nervous and trembling spells out and on for the last ten years. I have taken three bottles of your Paine's Celery Compound and all of the above-mentioned troubles have left me, and I can now do a good day's work. I go about my business all day long and I don't worry me, and I now feel better than I have in ten years. I have a good appetite and can eat and get around on foot as active as when I was a boy. My age is 65 years."

Speaking of the reign of anarchy in Breathitt county, the Indianapolis Sentinel says:

"The telegraphic reports from Jackson show that the region is getting into about as deplorable a state as could be imagined in a so-called civilized country. Arson has been added to assassination as a feud method of warfare, and insurance companies are canceling their policies on all property in the place. The people have resorted to barbaric conditions. The administration of justice, so far as they are concerned, is a farce, and the courts are proceeding with their duties only under military protection. Every man has become a law—or a defiance of law—unto himself. This is the legitimate result of the lawlessness that has characterized the Republican mountain counties of Kentucky. It is from the same classes that make this intolerable condition that were recruited the mob brought down to assassinate Gov. Goebel."

Forbids Cooking of Onions.

(Chicago Record-Herald.) The Appellate Court of Indiana has decided that cooking onions is bad for the neighborhood, thus affirming a decision by the lower court. The family of James Shroyer, of New Castle, Ky., over the store of Campbell Bros., who a general millinery business as the Shroyer family is fond of cooked onions, and the odor pervaded the store below and proved very offensive to the merchants and their customers. Campbell Bros. brought suit for an injunction, and an order was issued by the Circuit Court forbidding the cooking of the onions, and from this Shroyer appealed. The question was then carried to the Appellate Court.

MARRIED LIFE.

And the Great Lesson Which Should be Studied to Fully Enjoy Same.

Psychology is the remedy for the divorce evil, at least so say the Faculty of Ruskin University in Glen Elyn, Ill., who have started an anti-divorce movement, which encourages the study of psychology as the panacea for the national ill. "Woman should learn to know their husbands. Let wives and sweethearts study psychology, and thus become able to read the minds and dispositions of their husbands-to-be."

This is the decree of the anti-divorce society, made up of the Faculty mentioned, the woman's department of which now names Miss Ada C. Sweet, a well-known writer and club woman, as dean.

This woman's department of the University is determined upon conquering the divorce evil, and to do so believes that the "new woman" must be reformed and made into an improved species of new woman—a wife and mother—which, by the way, is simply a happy return to the good, old fashioned woman.

THE NEW "NEW WOMAN."

This proposed new woman will, however, so the faculty believes, combine the old and new to a degree that will make of her the typical woman of man's highest ideal.

"It is my theory that most divorces are caused by the failure of women to properly understand their husbands," said Superintendent R. T. Morgan, of Ruskin University. By teaching women psychology we will change all this and do away with the 500,000 divorces granted every year."

The new curriculum decided upon by the woman's department, with Miss Sweet as dean, embraces such studies as seem calculated to make good wives and mothers.

The theories of the faculty as to what methods will be effective in discouraging divorces and encouraging domestic harmony are set forth in the following table.
